| III.      | Should the Alternate Payee receive a pro-rata share of any Early Retirement Subsidies?   |
|           | Yes No(Most defined benefit pension plans have early retirement provisions that allow an employee to retire early with fullunreduced benefits if they complete a specific number of years of service. By doing this the company is subsidizing a larcportion of the employee's pension by eliminating the actuarial adjustment (the difference in the amount of monthly benefitemployee would receive at normal retirement age verses an early retirement age if there is no subsidy - Example: Anemployee could receive $1,000 per month at age 65, but if he/she elects to retire at age 55 he/she would receive $500 permonth for life if they had not completed the required number of years of service to receive the unreduced benefit of $1,000per month). |
| IV.       | Should the Alternate Payee receive a pro-rata share of any early retirement supplements, interim supplements or temporary benefits that become payable to the Participant which a not considered by the Plan Administrator to be a part of the Participant's accrued benefit.?   |
|           | Yes No(Most defined benefit pension plans have early retirement incentives that allow certain eligible employee's to retire early wadditional supplemental, interim or temporary benefits. Example: If an employee retires at age 55, the plan could pay a supplemental benefit to age 62, at which time the employee would be able to collect Social Security.)   |
